GIVERNY

Between 1885 and 1915, the picturesque village of Giverny welcomed hundreds of artists who were drawn by the prospect of painting en plein air, the presence of Claude Monet, and the beauty of the region. Many stayed for long periods, painted outdoors, purchased homes and studios, and ultimately transformed the village into an international artists' colony.

When Daniel J. Terra acquired several houses in Giverny in the 1990s, he lay the groundwork to help revive this artistic community, first through the exhibitions and colloquia developed by the Musée d'Art Américain, and then by the creation of an international residency program for art history scholars and artists. Since its inception in 2001, the Terra Summer Residency has fostered the creation and exploration of a truly international cultural dialogue while building an intellectual network for lifelong exchange.

Giverny is now both a tourist destination and a creative center, home to Monet's house and gardens and the Musée des Impressionnismes, as well as the residences of the Terra Foundation for American Art. These properties are available for academic conferences, student convenings, artist workshops, and other programs, such as the Terra Summer Residency.

TERRA FOUNDATION FOR AMERICAN ART

The Terra Foundation for American Art was established in 1978 by Daniel J. Terra (1911–1996), who worked throughout his lifetime to share his collection of American art: through the Terra Museum of American Art, first in Evanston, IL, and later in Chicago (1980–2004) and also through the Musée d'Art Américain in Giverny (1992–2008).

By the mid-1990s, the Chicago-based foundation decided to use its resources to support exhibitions and programs beyond those at the museums it operated, providing everwidening audiences with opportunities to experience American art. To complement its international endeavors, the Terra Foundation for American Art opened a fullystaffed resource center in Paris in 2009. The Terra Foundation's Paris Center welcomes a growing international community of scholars of American art, serving as a thriving nexus of intellectual exchange and research, offering lectures, workshops, and symposia. In addition, the Paris Center houses the only research library in Europe devoted exclusively to American art.

Today, the Terra Foundation for American Art supports worldwide study and presentation of historical art of the United States through its grants, initiatives, partnerships, art collection, and other resources. From its offices in Chicago and Paris, the foundation's staff continues to build on the founding mission, working to bring American art to the world and the world to American art.

MANSUY RESIDENCE

Sometimes called the "pink house," Mansuy has welcomed many artists since the turn of the 20th century. New Yorker William Howard Hart rented the property in the 1890s, much to the delight of his close friend, Theodore Butler, another young artist and son-in-law of Claude Monet, who was living in the house next door. When the house was converted into a hotel in 1909, numerous writers, actors, and artists from Paris spent weekends there. Mansuy can accommodate up to seven people.

CHAMPRENAULT RESIDENCE

Close to Mansuy Residence is "Champrenault," a cottage with shady, tree-lined gardens. It can accommodate up to two people.

HERVIEUX RESIDENCE

Hervieux is a cozy house with a wide veranda in the rear that overlooks a sweeping private garden. It can accommodate up to five people.

GOUPIL RESIDENCE

Goupil is a large comfortable house with a small walled garden in the rear. It can accommodate up to six people.

LE HAMEAU: THE WORKING HUB

This farmhouse was originally home to several artists from the Giverny colony (see cover image). Between 1889 and 1909, American artist Lilla Cabot Perry spent numerous summers with her family in Le Hameau ("The Hamlet"). She was eventually befriended by her neighbor, the great impressionist painter Claude Monet, who attended her musical soirées, joined her for walks in the gardens, and advised her on painting technique.

FACILITIES AND RESOURCES

Le Hameau houses the offices of the foundation's residency staff, artist studios, and a seminar room equipped with projector and screen, which also serves as a study space. A wide range of American art history digital resources are available on demand. Holdings from the foundation's Paris Center library are brought to Giverny upon request for the duration of residents' stay. This library is devoted exclusively to the visual arts of the United States from the eighteenth century to 1980. A list of the main libraries, art history departments, and art centers in Paris is also available. terraamericanart.org/europe/tfaa-europe-library/

ARTISTS' STUDIOS

Six studios are available to the artists in residence, four in Le Hameau and two adjacent to the Champrenault and Goupil residences. Artists are responsible for acquiring the materials necessary to execute their work. Supplies can be purchased in fine arts stores in Paris or in hardware stores near Giverny. The foundation does not provide computer imaging equipment.
